PRODUCTIVITY

UNDERSUPPLIED EQUALS LESS PRODUCTIVITY:

94%

of office workers feel they are less productive when they don't have all the supplies they need to work

SUPPLIES RULES:

Keeping the office supply room stocked will help employees get the job done;

62%

of office workers with supply rooms haven't been able to do their job effectively because they didn't have access to the supplies they needed

THE IMPORTANCE OF ORGANIZATION

DISORGANIZATION CONUNDRUM:

In today's offices, disorganization not only looks bad, it can lead to decreased morale and productivity;

3 IN 4 office workers believe that a disorganized office is a sign of deeper problems at a company

DISORGANIZED TO DISTRACTION:

How distracting is a disorganized office?

NEARLY 1 IN 3 (29%)

office workers find a disorganized office more harmful to office morale than office gossip

SETTING THE EXAMPLE:

Executives might want to tidy up their desks,

96% of office workers believe that organization is a sign of a better leader

KEY TO SUCCESS:

The benefits of organization aren't limited to the C-Suite,

98% of office workers would be more productive at their job if their office was more organized

EMBRACING ANALOG

PAPER VS. COMPUTER:

62%

of office workers prefer to manage their to-do list on a piece of paper rather than through a computer or digital device (38%)

84%

of office workers feel they are more likely to remember a work task if it is written on a Post-it® Note rather than sent through a digital reminder

SUPPLY AND DEMAND:

There can be stressful days in the office, but one way to combat the stress is having the supplies you need to be productive, of office workers feel overwhelmed without Post-it® Notes during the work day, followed by a daily planner (4.3%) and a professional notebook (30%)

47%

STICK TO IT:

Despite the rise of the digital office, the Post-it® Note is still a staple of office life; office workers, on average, use 30 Post-it® Notes per week, with more than

43%

using 25 or more

WHAT WE'RE WILLING TO SACRIFICE:

THE EARLY BIRD:

Office workers are aware of the importance of organization and many are willing to put in overtime,

66% stay late, come in early or on a weekend once a month or more to organize their workspace

OVERTIME ORGANIZATION:

For those who are willing to tidy up the office after hours, it's probably because they realize the importance of organization,

82% of those who get in early, stay late or come in on the weekends to organize their workspace believe a disorganized office is a sign that a company has deeper problems

*The Post-it® Brand Office Organization survey was conducted by Wakefield Research (www.wakefieldresearch.com) among 1,000 full-time U.S. office workers, between June 17th and June 29th, 2015, using an email invitation and an online survey.
